

Summary of stakeholder responses to consultation on proposed changes to Welsh law in relation to EU Directives on animal feed, food contact materials and extraction solvents

The consultation sought views on the proposals to correct deficiencies in national (Wales only) legislation relating to animal feed, food contact materials and extraction solvents, separately, to ensure the legislation operates effectively following the UK's exit from the European Union (EU).

Introduction

This consultation was issued on 04 August 2022 and closed on 01 September 2022.

The purpose of the consultation was to seek stakeholders' views, comments, and feedback on the proposals to correct deficiencies in national (Wales only) legislation relating to animal feed, food contact materials and extraction solvents, separately, to ensure the legislation operates effectively following the UK's exit from the European Union (EU).

The consultation was published on the Food Standards Agency (FSA) website, social media channels and emails sent to Local Authority Food Law Enforcement Officers and Key Stakeholder organisations.

The FSA is grateful to those stakeholders who responded and sets out in the table below responses in order of the issues considered.

The key proposals on which the consultation sought views were:

Animal Feed:

- To facilitate amendments to the lists of undesirable substances that are currently prescribed by reference to the lists in Directive 2002/32/EC, and to make it easier to adapt them to scientific and technical developments, we proposed incorporating these lists into the Animal Feed (Composition, Marketing and Use) (Wales) Regulations 2016. In addition, we also proposed retaining the controls set out in the Directive, and adjusting cross references from this legislation to the Directive. As part of this we will consider converting powers conferred by the Directive into domestic powers.
- To facilitate the future modification of the category list that is currently prescribed by reference to the list in Directive 82/475/EEC, we proposed incorporating that list into the Animal Feed (Composition, Marketing and Use) (Wales) Regulations 2016 and adjusting cross-references from this legislation to the Directive.

Food Contact Materials:

- To incorporate the lists currently prescribed by reference in Annex II of Commission Directive 2007/42/EC, as it stood on leaving the EU into a new Schedule in the Materials and Articles in Contact with Food (Wales) Regulations 2012.

- To remove cross-references to Commission Directive 2007/42/EC, including to its Annexes, within the Materials and Articles in Contact with Food (Wales) Regulations 2012.

Extraction Solvents:

- To set out the list of permitted extraction solvents in its entirety in the Food Additives, Flavourings, Enzymes and Extraction Solvents (Wales) Regulations 2013, removing the cross-references to Annex I to the Directive.
- To remove other cross-references in the 2013 Regulations to the Directive which are no longer appropriate or which contain inoperabilities as a result of EU exit, for example the reference to Article 3(c) of the Directive.

The Food Standards Agency's considered responses to stakeholders' comments are given in the last column of the table.

A list of stakeholders who responded can be found at the end of the document.

Do you agree with the familiarisation cost that has been identified? If not, please explain why.

Respondent	Comment	Response
Trading Standards Wales	No, the figure that has been used to calculate the familiarisation cost for Local Authorities has been taken from the annual report on Local Authority food law enforcement. This report would only provide the FTE for food standards officers. The consultation is proposing changes to animal feed legislation and should therefore include those Trading Standards Officers involved in animal feed official controls, this may also include Animal Health Officers. There are likely to be more LA officers that will need to familiarise themselves with the changes than those suggested as the FTE figures provided would not equate to whole individuals as animal feed would only form a part of a Trading Standards Officers role, they would also be involved with metrology, food, consumer safety and fair trading work.	Thank you for your detailed response. This information has been used to update and recalculate the familiarisation costs estimated for this work.

Are there any other changes that would help to provide greater clarity on regulating the presence of undesirable substances in animal feed? If yes, please explain what these are, and what benefits they might provide.

Trading Standards Wales	No, the familiarisation costs for Local Authorities were calculated using the Annual report on Local Authority food law enforcement and assumed that 47 people across 22 Local authorities in Wales would need to familiarise themselves with the legislative changes. That is the FTE figure for food standards in Wales, there will be considerably more LA officers that will need to familiarise themselves with the changes than suggested as the FTE figures provided would not equate to whole individuals, as food standards would only form a part of a Trading Standards Officers role, they would also be involved with metrology, consumer safety, fair trading work and animal feed. Food standards work is also undertaken by Environmental Health Officers in some LAs who have not been included in the calculation.	Thank you for your detailed response. This information has been used to update and recalculate the familiarisation costs estimated for this work.

The UK Flavour Association	The UK Flavour Association fully supports the incorporation of existing levels into UK law. As industry has been operating with the current list for some time, we do not see any significant impact or cost to business with this technical change to the legislation.	Comment noted.
